Radnor,
Empress of Natural Table Waters.

Is a unique natural combination of most valuable health-promoting ingredients, being also a delightful beverage equally adapted for the Table, the Sick Room or the Club.

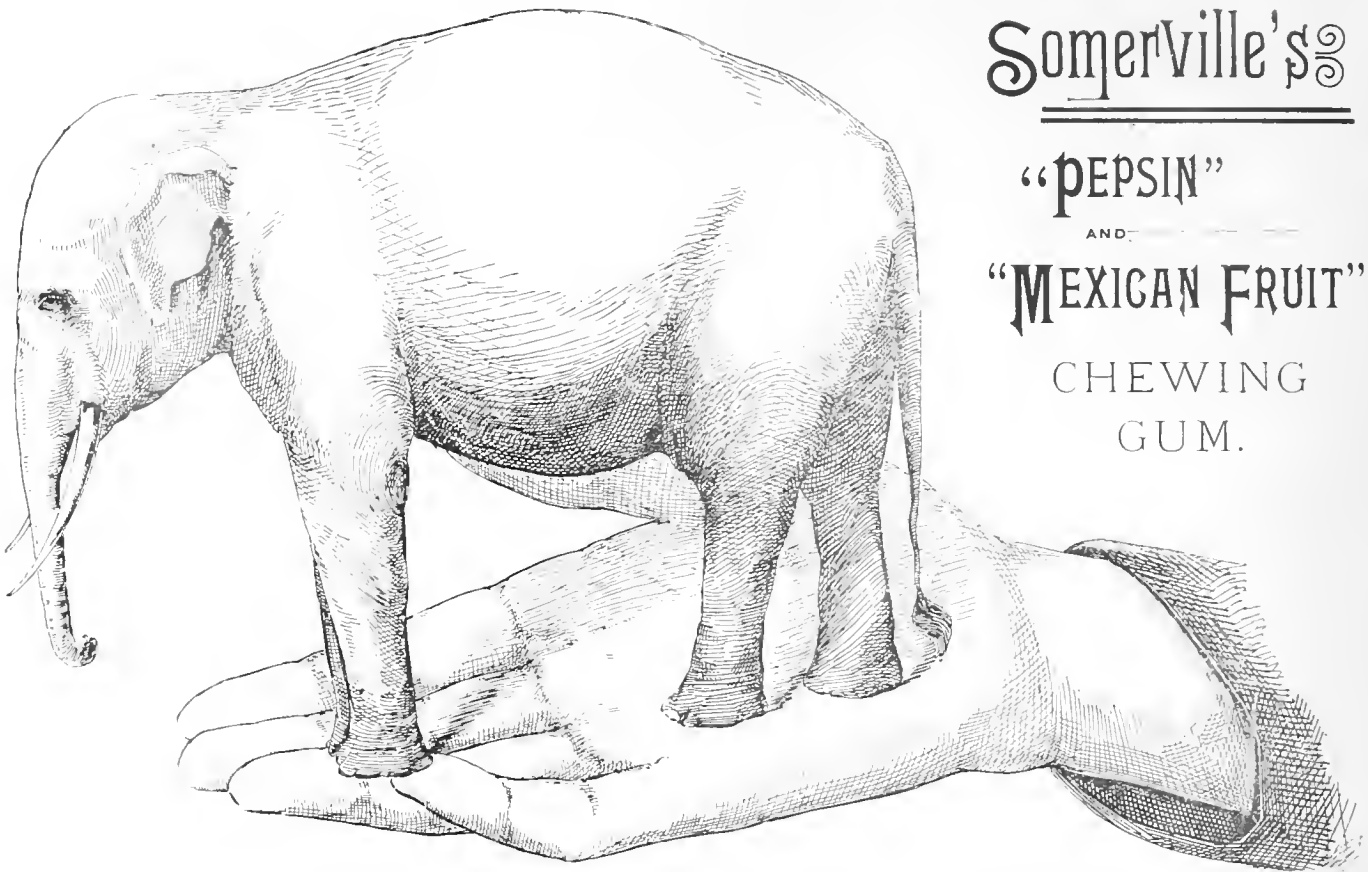

OPINIONS.

The Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Quebec writes:—"I would recommend all who care for good bright live mineral spring water to give RADNOR WATER a trial."

"I have recommended RADNOR WATER to my patients, and find it gives great satisfaction. Many prefer it to Apollinaris, in which preference I concur. As a table water it is delightfully refreshing."

FRANCIS W. CAMPBELL, M.D.,
Professor of Medicine, Faculty of Medicine, University of Bishop's College.

I have tried the RADNOR Canadian Mineral Water and consider it admirable. Faithfully yours,
WILSON BARRETT,

The Art of Engraving on Wood

Dates from 1418. The first blocks were engraved in a very crude manner, and it was not until Albert Durer, with his artistic skill, showed the possibilities of the art that its value as an illustrative process became known. Since his time, however, it has made rapid strides, and has now reached its highest point of excellence. The Germans are, perhaps, ahead of all others in the engraving of pictorial subjects, but the Americans take the lead in engraving for commercial purposes, such as the illustrating of manufacturers' catalogues and other forms of advertising. In this city the Brock Engraving Co. have shown by their work in the past that in the execution of the best class of commercial work they are not excelled. They employ engravers who have had extensive experience in the American cities, and are fully abreast of the times. It is managed by A. E. BROCK, and their office is in the Edge Block.

TRUE ECONOMY

Lies in buying good things. Good things need not be high priced. There's a certain hard wall of facts and figures, however, that stands between possibility and prodigal promises. There are certain prices below which no good, honest furniture can be bought. Those prices are ours. If you pay less you get less. No use dodging a fact.

LONDON

THE WESTERN MILITARY CENTRE.

LONDON'S MILITARY HISTORY dates as far back as 1838, in January of which year the 32nd Regiment arrived here, and the place for the first time became a military post. With more or less regularity, Imperial troops were stationed here till the breaking out of the grew to such dimensions that it was found necessary to use buildings on the old Ordinance Lands, on the east side of Wellington street, north of Dufferin avenue (then Duke street), as well as the old Royal Exchange on Ridout street, near Dundas, and other premises close by.

The presence in the city for years of Imperial troops could not but have its effect on the young men of the day. It inspired them with a martial ardor and enthusiasm that still animates the breasts of those who have not yet gone over to the great beyond, and has been transmitted to their sons—the young men who form the citizen-soldiers of to-day, and it is the development of this spirit that it is desired specially to deal with here.

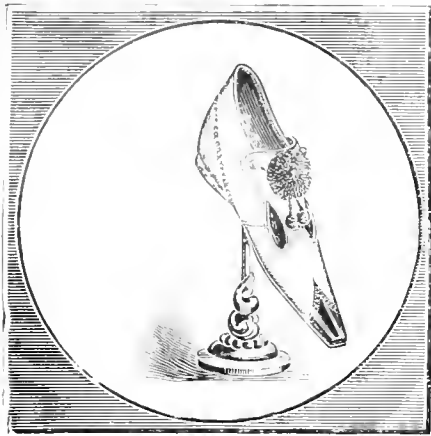

MILITARY SCHOOL, LONDON.

Crimean war. Then Her Majesty's regular forces were withdrawn from Canada, and it was not until February, 1862, when trouble threatened over the Trent affair, that the London garrison was again filled. From that year until the close of the American Civil War, various corps were stationed here, including the Royal Canadian Rifles, the 60th Rifles, the 53rd and 63rd Regiments, besides Military Train, Sappers and Miners, Batteries of Artillery, &c. Many members of these secured their discharge while here, and to-day are among London's most respected citizens. As the majority of Londoners will remember, these troops were quartered in the barracks which had been erected on what is now the northern half of Victoria Park, but during the sixties the garrison

FIRST MILITARY DISTRICT.

The military sentiment and organization in London had, in 1865, grown to such proportions that when the organization of districts was decided on, the Government had no hesitation in selecting London as the headquarters of Military District No. 1. Lieut.-Col. J. B. Taylor was gazetted Deputy Adjutant-General, and Lieut.-Col. James Moffat, Brigade Major. Both these gentlemen (since deceased) had taken active part in the formation of local companies, and their appointment was received with general favor by officers and men throughout the district. In 1882, Cols. Taylor and Moffat were succeeded respectively by Cols. Jackson and Aylmer, two thorough soldiers.

THE MILITARY SCHOOL.

In 1886 the Government realized the necessity for a Military School in the west, and London, being the headquarters of the district, was, of course, chosen as the location of the new institution of military education. The site selected is the most suitable it is possible to procure. Indeed, so satisfied was the department of this, that some years ago Carling's Heights, as the grounds surrounding Wolseley Barracks are called, was chosen as a permanent site for the holding of the annual brigade camps.

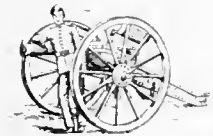

The work of erection began on May 5th, 1886, and on March 31st, 1888, the school was opened. Col. Henry Smith was commissioned Commandant and Deputy Adjutant-General as well—positions which he continues to fill. The other members of the staff are:—Major and Lieut.-Col. Vidal, commanding No. 1 Company, Royal Regiment of Canadian Infantry; Lieut. and Capt. Hemming; Lieut. and Capt. Dennison; Lieut. Carpenter and Surgeon-Major Hanovan. No. 1 Company, R.R.C.I., consists of a permanent force of about one hundred men. The staff is a most efficient one, the Commandant being one of the most thorough officers in the service in Canada—a fact ample proof of which is found in the splendid condition of No. 1 Company, and the thoroughness of the system of training employed in the school.

CAVALRY.

The first troop of cavalry raised in London was in 1854, Capt. Burgess being the organizing officer. About the same time the late Col. Cole formed a troop at St. Thomas, and these, with troops subsequently raised at Courtwright and Kingsville, were in 1872 organized as a regiment, with Col. Cole in command. In 1866 the London troop of cavalry, under Lieut. Stothers, was called out, owing to the Fenian trouble, and attached to the 60th Rifles, but did not leave the city. The regiment is now known as the First Hussars, Lieut.-Col. Gartshore, a most capable officer and enthusiastic soldier, in command, with 2nd Lieut. J. G. Merrison, Adjutant; Hon. Major Ben. Higgins, Quartermaster; Capt. Thomas Hobbs, M. P. P., Paymaster; Surgeon-Major S. A. King, Surgeon, and J. A. Wilson, Veterinary Surgeon. "A" troop, of this city, is still commanded by Capt. J. B. Stothers, and under his charge continues to rank as the leading cavalry corps of the district.

ARTILLERY.

To the late Duncan MacKenzie, a Waterloo hero, and grandfather of Paymaster Judge Macmillan and Captain Moore, of the Seventh Fusiliers, belongs the honor of organizing in 1841 the London Independent Volunteer Artillery, which for fifteen years he kept up at his own expense. Among the first to join this corps were the late Thomas Peel (ex-alderman) and Mr. A. S. Abbott, the venerable ex-City Clerk. The successor to this was the London Field Battery, organized in 1841; but it was not until Col. Shanly, assisted by the late Sergt-Major Starr, took hold of it in 1856 that it assumed the status of a formidable corps. The field guns were brought from England, and were the first used by Canadian militia. Under Col. Shanly's command the London Field Battery became second to no other in Canada, and a credit to the British service. Several years ago Col. Shanly retired, and was succeeded in the command by Capt., now Brevet Col. John Peters, who joined the battery in 1866. In that year, the time of the Fenian raid, the battery was among the troops summoned to the frontier, and was on active service at Sarnia for two weeks under Col. Shanly. While at Sarnia the battery was inspected by Gen. Sherman, of the U. S. army, who praised the battery most highly, and stated he did not think it possible for a militia battery to reach such a state of efficiency. Col. Peters is still Major in command, the other officers being Lieut. James A. Hesketh; Second Lieut. Benj. Shaw-Wood; Surgeon V. A. Brown, M. D., and Veterinary Surgeon Chas. S. Tamlin.

THE SEVENTH BATTALION.

London, in 1855, boasted of but two volunteer companies—No. 1 Rifles, commanded by Capt. Hammond, and No. 2 Highland Rifles, commanded by Capt. (afterwards Brigade Major) Jas. Moffat. It was not until March 21th, 1865, that No. 3 Rifle company (Capt. C. F. Goodhue) was organized. In 1861-2 considerable excitement was caused throughout Canada over the Trent affair, and in no part of the country was greater enthusiasm exhibited than in London. A drill association, composed of prominent citizens, was formed and rapid progress made in the use of arms. From this sprang Infantry companies 1 and 2, organized Dec. 26th, 1862, and Jan. 23rd, 1863. The officers of the former were John B. Taylor, Andrew Cleghorn and Geo. S. Burns, and of No. 2 Hiram Chisholm, Archibald McPherson and Alex. M. Kirkland. These companies formed the nucleus from which sprang the Seventh or "Prince Arthur's Own," as it was first called. In the spring of 1866 a meeting of the officers was held in the old Drill Shed, and at that meeting the Seventh Battalion, London Light Infantry, was organized, Lieut.-Col. John B. Taylor (then D. A. G. of the district) being placed in command.

It may be interesting here to give the officers of the Battalion as found in the Militia List of 1877. It is as follows:—Lieut.-Col., John B. Taylor; Majors, Arch. McPherson, Robert Lewis; Paymaster, Duncan (now Judge) McMillan; Adjutant, Thomas Green; Quartermaster, John B. Smyth; Assistant Surgeon, Richard Payne, M.D. No. 1 Co.—Capt. D. C. Macdonald, Lieutenant H. Gorman, Ensign W. H. Nash. No. 2 Co.—Capt. E. W. Griffith, Lieutenant Ed. Mackenzie, Ensign A. W. Porte. No. 3 Co.—Capt. Thos. Millar, Lieutenant H. Bruce, Ensign W. McAdams. No. 4 Co.—Capt. W. R. Meredith (now Chief Justice), Lieutenant R. M. Meredith (now Vice-Chancellor), Ensign C. S. Corrigan. No. 5 Co.—Capt. M. D. Dawson, Lieutenant D. A. Hannah, Ensign Jas. Magee. No. 6 Co.—Capt. W. H. Code, Lieutenant Jas. A. Craig, Ensign Frank McIntosh. No. 7 Co.—Capt. John Macbeth, Lieutenant Emmanuel Teale, Ensign H. H. Coyne. No. 8 Co.—Capt. John Jackson, Lieutenant S. Kent, Ensign Thos. Elliott. These were the officers at the time of the Fenian raid of 1866, when one or two companies were stationed at Windsor for over three months, and the whole Battalion was placed under active service at Fort Erie. At the latter point, although not coming under fire, they were subjected to trying forced marches and had to endure much fatigue. The members of that force (or the "Veterans of '66," as they are called) now resident in London are at present making preparations for their annual celebration to be held next month.

On the retirement of Col. Taylor from the command of the battalion, he was succeeded by Col. Robt. Lewis. The next commander was Col. John Macbeth; then Col. John Walker; then Col. W. DeRay Williams; then Col. Thos. H. Tracey; then Col. Payne, and finally Col. Wm. Lindsay. It was while Col. Walker was at the head of the battalion that the name of the corps was changed from "Seventh Batt., London Light Infantry," to "Seventh Fusiliers."

On the honorary membership roll of the Seventh Battalion are found the names of many prominent men of Canada and

The departure of the "boys" for the scene of trouble, amidst the cheers of thousands who lined the streets, and the sobs and tears of mothers, wives and sweethearts, will be remembered by most citizens. The trying marches through the "gaps," and the hardships there endured in the late winter time, as well as the tiresome journey from the C. P. R. line along the Saskatchewan River to Clark's Crossing with supplies, will ever be fresh in the memories of the noble fellows. True, they had no actual fighting, for there was none for them to do; but they were there ready to carry out orders, and were fully prepared for a conflict should occasion for such arise. As it was, the services performed by the 7th Fusiliers in 1885 were fully as important to the Queen and country as those of any other corps engaged in the campaign.

The battalion returned home after a service of about four months, and their arrival here was made the occasion of a great demonstration, which for heartiness has seldom been equalled. Along with other battalions the members of the Seventh were subsequently awarded silver medals by Her

THE FAMOUS CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE.

A few days ago we had the pleasure of calling on Messrs. Shaw & Elliott, Principals of the Central Business College, Toronto, and while there were shown through their extensive and well known institution. We were somewhat astonished at the large number of students in attendance at this season of the year, but considering the superior work performed in that school we know that the young ladies and gentlemen who have chosen "The Central" in preference to the other schools of Toronto have made no mistake. It is a first-class school in which to get a practical business education. Their old Central Business College at Stratford is up to the mark at the present time the same as in days gone by. Messrs. Shaw & Elliott speak well of the Principal and Manager of their Stratford school, Mr. P. McIntosh. He is conducting the College in an able manner, and to-day it is one of the leading schools of Western Ontario. We can cordially recommend these two schools. We know they do first-class work, and those who attend will be well repaid. Write to either school for a Catalogue.

The Women's

 ...for the handsome

Majesty, of the possession of which they are justly proud.

The Battalion is to-day in excellent hands. Of Colonel Lindsay it is no mere figure of speech to say that he is every inch a soldier. When he took hold, several months ago, it was with the intention of making the Battalion equal to the best in the Dominion, and there is every indication that he is succeeding in his self-imposed task to the fullest. He has surrounded himself with a capable staff, Majors Beattie and Hayes being tried and experienced officers, while the other officers are young gentlemen full of military enthusiasm and promise. The staff and officers are as follows:—Lieut.-Col. Wm. Lindsay; Majors Thomas Beattie and Geo. W. Hayes; Captains Lewis H. Dawson, Henry A. Kingsmill, John Graham, Fred. J. Fitzgerald, James A. Thomas, John M. Moore; Lieutenants Oliver M. Denison, Wm. J. Taylor; Second Lieutenants Arthur Magee, Edward O. Graves, Wm. H. Allison; Paymaster, His Honor Judge Duncan Macmillan; Acting Adjutant, Capt. H. A. Kingsmill; Quarter-Master, R. M. McElheran; Surgeon, Wm. J. Mitchell, M.D.; Assistant Surgeon, John Piper, M.D.

The Seventh Band has long enjoyed the reputation of being among the leading musical organizations in Canada. This reputation the officers have determined to maintain, and with that object in view they recently secured the services of Mr. Tresham, a gentleman of superior qualifications, as leader and instructor. That gentleman has recently reorganized the band, retaining the best of the old-time musicians and introducing considerable new blood, so that the prospects are that the Seventh Band will, before long, be better than ever.

Two or three months ago the Officers of the Seventh rented the large hotel building at the corner of Princess avenue and Richmond street, and converted it into a regimental club house. On the ground floor is the mess rooms of the officers and non-coms., both of which have been sumptuously furnished and present a cosy and home-like appearance. The two upper stories are devoted entirely to the men, and are furnished with a beautiful piano, billiard, pool and card tables. The rooms are well lighted throughout. The reading room is kept furnished with good current literature, and it is the intention to shortly establish a reference and reading library. The club will add greatly to the interest taken by the members in the Regiment.

Col. Lindsay and officers of the Seventh certainly deserve the hearty sympathy of the citizens in their efforts to maintain a battalion that is a credit to the headquarters of No. 1 Military District.

ALE AND STOUT

"Considered dietetically ale possesses a three-fold property: it quenches thirst; it stimulates and cheers; and lastly, it nourishes or strengthens. * * * From these combined qualities, ale proves a refreshing and salubrious drink (if taken in moderation), and an agreeable and valuable stimulus and support to those who have to undergo much bodily fatigue."—DR. PEREIRA.

"One of the best beverages that ever were produced."—W. E. GLADSTONE.
